YOUNGSTOWN, May 29.—Battle lines in the nation's biggest steel strike in 19 years, crimson in spots
after bruising encounters with police, were drawn tighter around mills of three big independent producers in six states today after union leaders exhorted grim pickets to fight "for their economic freedom."Murray Determined In Ohio's Mahoning valley where most of the plants of Republic Steel Corp. and Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. were idle, Philip Murray,
chairman of the CIO Steel Workers' Organizing Committee, fanned the hopes of thousands of idle Youngstown district mill hands with a fiery proclamation:"We are going to whip Youngstown Sheet & Tube and Republic Steel corporation—they can't stop us."Murray and his aides in the SWOC drive to obtain signed bargaining contracts from Republic
Steel and Tube, and Inland Steel Corp. turned their attention to closing of several scattered mills
after firing urgent appeals to Washington for federation intervention.Latest units to suspend production along the broad Great Lakes strikes from included one in Michigan and two in Pennsylvania. More than 72,000 were idle.Figures Disputed The SWOC put forth the claim that 72,240 steel workers out of 77-900 employed in the strike-affected mills had joined the walkout but Republic officials in Cleveland disputed the figures. They said steel plants were running at 40 per cent of capacity in Chicago, Canton, Buffalo and Warren, O., and announced that an airplane was employed to drop food to beleaguered workers behind the picket lines in Republic's Niles mill.Feeling was reported tense along the picket lines in towns where Republic claimed it was maintaining operations, but the only open violence
was in South Chicago where police repulsed 500 marchers advancing on a Republic plant in operation. Injured included 15 marchers and six policemen.

Beautiful But Businesslike!

Betty Samsell

It might be said of stunning Betty Samsell of Van Wert, O., that she is beautiful but businesslike. Although Betty, a senior at Miami university at Oxford, O., was selected as the most beautiful co-ed on the campus, she is taking a business course and is intent on a commercial career rather than professionalizing her pulchritude.TRACK CHAMPS

NEW YORK, May 29.—A policeman off duty and wearing civilian clothes, turned suddenly on three robbers who held up a bar today,
opened fire with his service revolver,
killed one of the men and captured the others.Patrolman George Maurer, after going off duty at midnight, changed to civilian clothes, and ordered a beer at a Lexington ave. bar. There were seven other customers in the place.The three robbers drew revolvers
and announced: "This is a stickup!
everybody in the back room!"Maurer stayed at the bar. One of the robbers stepped over to him, showed a revolver against him and growled nervously: "Get going,
you!"Maurer gulped his beer and started toward the rear. Suddenly he whirled and fired. The bullet struck the robber between the eyes and dropped him. Maurer whirled again and fired as the other two men dived for shelter.Maurer fired two more shots, and the men surrendered.Victims' Parents

Columbia's "Lemon Pie Kid" Will Compete In Distict MeetBob Pasco, the "lemon pie kid" from the sixth grade of Columbia school, is Salem's champion marble shooter today. He's the dark complexed youth with thick, black hair who exclaimed after winning his school championship, "Boy, I'm glad I won! My sister promised me half a lemon pie if I did."Bob became city mibs champion

His victory, earning for him the right to compete in the district matches at Canton, June 12, came as an upset to tournament observers, who had figured Frederick Stamp from the eighth grade of Junior High school to walk off with championship honors.Stamp, nervous from the excitement which accompanied the finals,
was unable to show the accurate
shooting form which won for him
the championship of Junior High.
He lost three of the six matches heplayed in the finals, but did manage to beat Pasco in the round-robin play, 7 to 5.
George Drakulich of Prospect school, 11 years old and the youngest player in the finals, was runner-up for the championship, losing out to Pasco in a three-way playoff
made necessary when Drakulich, Pasco and Tommy Leslie each won four matches and lost two in the round-robin in which each player met every other finalist.Leslie, representing Reilly school in the finals after recovering from a case of swollen glands which kept him confined to his home for several days this week, lost to both Drakulich and Pasco in the threeway playoff. He had previously defeated Pasco, 7 to 5, in round-robin
play.CITY PLANNING

New Shelter House Bookings Are Piling UpOnly recently completed, Centennial park's new shelter house already is booked up for 21 picnics it was announced today by Frank Thomas, caretaker.In all, Thomas has scheduled 56
outings for the two shelter houses
at the park for the coming season, which will be officially opened, so far as the public is concerned, next Saturday, June 5, with a reunion of the Spiker family, followed on Sunday with the Freed family reunion.On two successive Sundays early in the season, Thomas has scheduled five reunions each. He is confident that the coming summer
will be one of the busiest in a number of years at the park.The shelter house was constructed by the Salem Kiwanis club at a cost of more than $1,000.Local contractors, skilled workers such as masons, carpenters, electricians and plumbers, as well as builders supply houses and hardware stores contributed to the project.Kiwanis club members themselves wielded saws and hammers, contributing several hundred hours of actual labor on the project.

The shelter house differs somewhat from the first shelter house in that it is entirely inclosed. In the summer, the large windows will swing open to permit ventilation.

During chilly weather the windows are closed and heat can be supplied by the large fireplace at the west end of the structure.

The shelter house is equipped with chairs and tables, electric lights and other appurtenances. It has running water, electric ranges

and a Monel metal sink, in addition to other conveniences, such as outlets, etc.With the exception of grading and landscaping details, work on the project has been completed.SCHOOL PLANS alienation of affection suit was filed in common pleas court Friday

by Mrs. Marie Leach Crowl of Salem against Mary Kirst, also of Salem.Mrs. Crowl alleges the defendant persuaded her husband, Willard Crowl, to leave her while she was bedfast from an automobile accident occurring Feb. 5, 1936. She also states her husband has filed a divorce action against her and that Mrs. Kirst induced him to take this step.The couple was married Feb. 23, 1935, and the wife charges, the defendant began a systematic campaign to destroy her husband's affection shortly after the ceremony.
Mrs. Crowl says she always considered herself as a dutiful and loving wife and the defendant's actions were solely responsible for the separation from her husband.The plaintiff states Crowl has ceased to contribute to her support and that she is physically unable to care for herself. The suit was filed by Bert Leach, Mrs. Crowl's father,

The court also confirmed a com-

bar the sale of liquor.Thomas Fleaka, beer parlor operator, had sought to enjoin the board of elections from certifying

SOMETHING IN HOLIDAYS

Coincidence gives Americans something special in holidays this year, with Memorial day and Independence day both falling on Sunday.

That makes possible two delightful long week-ends—three, counting Labor day. Holidays like these are worth taking the trouble to enjoy. Those fortunate enough to be able to take a half or full day on Saturday have the equivalent of a short vacation.

When calendar reformers want to thump the tub for their cause, they dazzle their victims with promises of a calendar in which all holidays would fall on Sundays, Mondays and Saturdays, thereby assuring at least a two-day stretch away from the job.

The prospect is, indeed, attractive. Just two things prevent it from getting converts. One is certainty that calendar reform, at the rate it's moving, won't get here in time to help those now living. The other is suspicion that on Tuesday morning, when everybody gets back to work, sunburned and broke, long holidays won't seem nearly so attractive.

CHECKERED FLAG

The 500 miles automobile race at Indianapolis will thrill its 25th Memorial day crowd this year. It is one of the oldest events in the country.

Despite emphasis placed on the Indianapolis speedway as a scientific enterprise for improving automobiles, the vast crowds which visit it each year are looking for a thrill. There is no objection to a race which produces no accidents, but if there were to be a succession of uneventful years the crowds eventually would go somewhere else.

It is to the credit of the speedway's managers, therefore, that they continue to strive toward the objective of a safe race. Long ago, they decided that in order to make the event meaningful to designers it would have to be given color and drama, to attract crowds and pay the prizes which make the race worthwhile. But unnecessary hazards never have been tolerated.

Safety is the objective. If it be not always reached critics should reflect on the probability that at ordinary road speeds less skilled drivers traveling to and from Indianapolis will stand in greater danger of accident than the professionals who risk death knowingly on the two and a half mile speedway.

CIVIL LIBERTIES

An interesting point about civil liberties is raised by complaints charging the Ford Motor Co. with intimidation and coercion in violation of the labor relations act.

Details of the incident are not clear, but United Automobile Workers' union charges Ford Co. employees attacked organizers outside the company's Dearborn plant.

The charge assumes the attack was ordered by the company. A company spokesman says it was provoked by unionists in order "to trump up a charge of Ford brutality." The men concerned, says the company spokesman, were regular employees who resented the presence of the unionists.

Both sides agree that Ford employees resisted—actively resisted—union organizers. They disagree, however, on the point of the company's responsibility for the acts of its employees.

If the time has come in the United States when an employee must be responsible to his employer under federal law for what he does outside the plant in matters of personal judgment, including resistance or capitulation to union organizers, the civil liberties watchdogs are going to be kept frantically busy. They will be kept busy, that is, unless they assume that civil liberties are a kind of monopoly, to be enjoyed only by persons wearing a particular kind of button.

THE STARS SAY :

For Sunday, May 30

Sunday's horoscope is a very promising one, especially for the clergy, all matters ecclesiastical and for those in employment or having ambitions to gain preferment or dignities from those in places of power and authority.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a year of progress and promotion, both in finances and in employment. It is a time to seek these, although a change may be involved, hazardous if carelessly considered but profitable if handled wisely.

A child born on this day may have much talent and ambitions and will be diligent and industrious although restless and fond of change. Its good judgment and fine personality may enhance its success and fortunes.

For Monday, May 31

Monday's astrological forecast is a rather doubtful one, with testimonies of much liveliness and activity, but probably in an unprofitable or questionable direction. There are signs of fraud, duplicity and probably scandal, as well as open hostility, opposition and vindictive enmity.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves confronted by a rather treacherous year with much activity, but probably in efforts to circumvent fraud, uncertain litigation, hostile attacks or virulent enmities or opposition. With vigilance, prudence and precaution, these may be averted.

A child born on this day may be active and energetic, versatile and clever, but may make enemies and provoke opposition and slander by its too ready and pointed tongue or pen.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, May 29—If I sneak this column under the wire on time I'll be a honey. The deadline is only 15 minutes away and they have been telephoning from headquarters to know what's the idea and what do I intend to do about it? So here goes slappity-bang. Bucking the columnar headwinds.

Maybe this will pad out a little: Last night I went to see a rehearsal of an aesthetic dance. One of those where gauzy gazelles in mosquito netting leap for buttercups in the ozone. It was interesting but I could not shake off an unholy thought.

That was: What a platoon of bumble bees could do to the performers! Just a low mind from the high grass. O, yes, they call such diodes eurythmy. As a matter of fact I had this column in the bag early this morning. A notebook full of jottings. But off went the coat, carrying it to the tailor.

And he's closed for the day. A lot of things keep jumping into my head. Like popping corn. For instance: Nazimova. Weird. Aside from being a great artist she goes on and on in those spooky white-faced things by zsen. But thrives on them. Never looking a day older.

A few flibbertibbets on mutaches: Was Douglas Fairbanks the father of the tremlin effect? And who invented the Charlie Chaplin cut we used to call the aviator's mustache? The most comic article manufactured to me is mustache wax. The pin nearest upper lip trimming is Paul Whiteman's. You could get the whole thing in one of those large capsules like Grandama used to dose us for the vapors. Beating out a column this way is as easy as anything. Look, I'm not even looking at the typewriter keys. Heigh ho! Heel, toe and a one-two-three!

Herbert C. Lewis, down on the city editor's desk of the New York American, has written a book, "Gentleman Overboard," amid the zealotry of copy reading. That's an achievement. I used to be a city editor myself and know. A city editor's assistant is the lad to wit, namely viz, who does all the hard work. I like to watch those curiously inspecting coupes on the avenue in the desolation of nightfall. Dress designers copping ideas and carping. Sudden thought passing Broadway and 53rd street: Is there a jollier click and smash than a bowling ball sweeping the alley clean?

The pontifical Times gives Annabelle Lees as one of the Must Know poems. Fiddlesticks! It is the maddest ever written and what meter for a master! Mrs. Belloc-Lowndes sounds like a doo-dad stuffed with jelly. Power of suggestion: Helen Hayes is actually beginning to look like Queen Victoria. How am I doing? So far I'm not even panting. Charles Washburn, one of them himself, has written a bang-up volume in defense of pressagentry. But it needs no defense. Honestly done it is an honorable calling. So I believe.

Five days ago a dream lady with The Voice One Never Forgets called up—a genealogist, she was. And she was tracking back the McIntyres. She hoped to back track them up the gang plank of the Mayflower—or the steps of the galleons. She said she'd invite me to tea—but hasn't. A lovely ship that passed in the night. By the name of Smith. How does one find a Smith with no initials in New York? Give me a voice or a letter and I do not have to see the person to know All.

Some months ago and within the same week two friends sent me a pair of beautiful gloves. Speckly skin as smooth as cream. A few days later I learned by a newspaper ad they were giraffe skin and cost $16.50 a pair. They had just been tossed casually in a bureau drawer. But immediately I wrapped them in tissue paper. And have not as yet mustered the courage to wear them. None of my suits seem to go with the $16.50 gloves. They need something by Tiffany.

Scene in the park with shadows lengthening over the swan lake. Two horseback riders had drawn up at the edge of the bridge path—he and she. He, softly, as I passed: "And you will never change your mind?" I dared to glance back and she was slowly shaking her head. A short while later he wheeled his horse around and galloped off without her. A lover no more persistent than that does not deserve the gal! Our enlarged bathroom is finished. As soon as I reach the end of this sheet and it is almost here—I'm going to have the first plunge. A leisurely sash. The lathery sort, followed by one of those brisk towel rubs that makes one feel all skippy and floaty. And ready to romp into a three-inch steak.

HEALTH

By Dr. Royal S. Copeland
New York City

SKIN TESTING as a means of detecting certain diseases has been used for the past quarter of a century. Within recent years it has come to be regarded as particularly valuable in the recognition of what are known as "allergic" disturbances.

This procedure was originally used to determine the presence of tuberculosis. It is then called the "tuberculin test." It is applied by injecting or scratching into the skin of the forearm certain protein products derived from the killed germs of tuberculosis.

The place where the injection was made is examined 48 hours later. If redness is found and possibly swelling in the region of inoculation, the test is accepted as "positive." After the first 48 hours the procedure is repeated in the other arm. The test is regarded as "negative" if there is no reaction in either arm.

Test Is Great Aid
When this measure was first proposed, the medical profession hoped it might prove to be a sure means of detecting tuberculosis in its very early stage. It has been decided that the test is not always reliable. But it is accepted as a great aid in determining the tendency to tuberculosis in young children.

Another example of the value of skin testing is its use in determining the resistance of an individual to diphtheria. No doubt you are familiar with what is known as the "Schick test." It is a painless and safe procedure, widely used in all large cities. It is especially valuable as a check on the success of the inoculation against diphtheria.

Allergic Diseases
As I have indicated, skin testing is of particular importance in the study of allergic diseases. The words "allergy" and "allergic" are applied when there is a peculiar individual sensitivity to certain substances, notably foods, articles of dress or household substances. For example, an asthmatic sufferer is usually sensitive to the proteins of certain foods; in hay fever the victim may be sensitive to the pollen of certain grasses.

In the skin tests used to determine the exciting agent of allergic disturbances, extracts are made from foods, pollens, animal dander and other suspected materials. These extracts are then injected or scratched into the skin.

Answers to Health Queries
I. M. Q.—I have been troubled with a nasal condition for seven years. In summer it is characterized by violent sneezing and watery eyes. In winter the nose swells on the inside making breathing difficult. I have frequently had a cold sore in the left nostril. What would you advise in my case?

A.—This is probably due to nasal catarrh. Have the nose and throat carefully examined. For further particulars send a self-addressed stamped envelope and repeat your question.

Dr. Copeland is glad to answer inquiries from readers who send an addressed, stamped envelope with their questions. Address all letters to Dr. Copeland, New York City.

STRUTHERS

"Rich Cargoes" by Henry C. Rowland

CHAPTER XXVIII

The Colonel stopped speaking and sat looking down at them with a sort of brooding melancholy. He gave no evidence of being under the least emotion. His disclosure had been made in the dispassionate narrative tone of an elderly adventurer describing early activities partly to be deplored and yet in which he takes a certain relish in reviewing.

Isobel was staring at him intently, lids narrowed, her expression rather of perplexity than of shock or horror. Sandy understood her problem. He was unable to decide whether to accept the Colonel's confession as being true in whole, in part, or to dismiss it all as the invention of a mind once brilliant but now returned to the childish indulgence of imagination one might find in a young boy who has crammed his head with stories of wild adventure.

Perhaps the quartette come here to meet the Colonel and to profit as much as possible by his brain offering had heard it all before. Sandy reflected, Vinckers, however, looked puzzled, dubious. Glancing at his face Sandy was inclined to believe that the overwhelming deposition to which they had just listened now inspired Vinckers with the same doubts that were felt by Isobel and by himself. The man looked set back, almost dispirited. It flashed into Sandy's mind that this let down might be due to a double cause, that not only was Vinckers disgusted at seeing the props of his hope of blackmail knocked from under but that he was beginning to wonder if perhaps his own comparatively limited charges against the Colonel might be merely a part of a stupendous self delusion, that all of this grandiose outlay described was actually no more than the dreams of a constipated imagination become fixed ideas. In such a case if the knowledge of the Colonel's past that Vinckers believed himself to possess had its origin in nothing more credible than the Colonel's own babblings to other people and reported by them, then Vinckers must actually find himself with nothing.

And now this prop to store up the vehicle of Vinckers' hopes seemed knocked from under. Isobel, who appeared to have reached a decision about what she had just heard said gently, almost indifferently:—

"That's all very terrible, Uncle dear, but to tell the truth I'm not so surprised as you might think. For sometime I have suspected that you must have had a terrific past."

The Colonel looked down upon her thoughtfully. "I see plainly that you do not believe a word of it, my dear. Well, perhaps not believe myself. I find it hard to believe myself. But there's one more fact I feel you ought to know and which you are bound to believe because I hold the proof of it here in my hand. I am not your great-uncle's dear child."

Sandy drew a deep breath. Then he glanced at Vinckers' face and noticed a blackmailer had previously looked disappointed but now showed an utter dismay. It was plain to Sandy that the cable to Vinckers' last anchor, his best bower, was on the point of snapping to leave him hopelessly adrift. The fresh blow that ensued made Sandy feel as if Mouse swaying gently had fallen on him. For the Colonel said in the same deep placed voice with its tinge of melancholy:—

"I am not your great-uncle, my dear child, nor am I any blood kin to you at all. These documents will prove that conclusively."

"In the eyes of the law," the Colonel said, "I am your father. But your adopted father. I took out papers of adoption by which you were made my daughter and my heiress many years ago on the death of your own father who was my dear friend. Entirely against my orders he met his death through an incident, an aftermath of my unlawful operations in the state next the one of which he was Commissioner."

Isobel said in the voice of one numbing the beloved victim of delirium:—

"I absolve you of that, Uncle dear, and I'll keep on calling you Uncle if you don't mind. Now do please get down and come in. We've all been through a dreadful strain and ought to rest."

"One moment," said the Colonel. "While we are about it, there is still something out of order that must be corrected here and now. I have born no ill will nor have cherished any rancor against these four guests of ours because I have understood their positions and the workings of natures such as theirs. Crime, criminal method of whatever sort is less than error, a distorted state of mind. Also I know much of their past and feel sorry for them. They have suffered adversity and one of them has suffered a frightful experience. I wish to be kind, to be indulgent and it is no part of my intention that when they leave here tomorrow on return of the cruiser they shall go empty handed. But there is one thing on which I must insist."

He stared at Vinckers from under his bushy eyebrows. The benignant face became commanding, austere. "You will return immediately the jewels given by Mr. Crewe to Isobel and which you managed to steal from the grotto in my brief absence."

Vinckers, Sandy perceived, whether guilty or not guilty of this charge was quite prepared to face it. He answered emphatically:—

"There at least your wrong, Colonel I have not got the jewels." The Colonel's face became more menacing. He leaned lower over the rail of the hunting howdah. "Do you attempt to deny that you tracked me to the grotto and took the jewels from the shelf of rock?" "I deny it, sir, most emphatically," Vinckers answered. "I tracked you part of the way, but I did not go into the grotto."

"You are a liar, sir," The Colonel's voice thundered out like an explosion. It sent a tremor through the group. For the first time Sandy felt that perhaps he had been more truth than fiction in the confession to which he had just listened. This reverberating voice, the sudden blaze of ferocity in the erstwhile benignant face was entirely in role with the character that the Colonel had described himself at one time to have been. Even the elephant reacted to it. A sort of quiver passed through the great bulk that stirred then slowly moved in a semi-circle so that Mouse stood facing them.

Vinckers showed that however much a blackleg he might be, at least he was no coward. Hester, close beside him, manifested the same cool nerve, more in fact, as she had none of Vinckers' experience with elephants' moods and whims. Mouse had sidled round in a nervous manner, made restless by the gusty anger in the Colonel's voice and his harsh pitch and volume. Besides this fidgety movement, Mouse showed also his quietude by a more rapid fanning of his great ears, which are a sort of barometer of the elephantine disposition. His half turn brought Vinckers and Hester, at the foot of the low steps and close together, within the swing of Mouse's trunk. But neither gave ground an inch.

The Colonel's face at that moment was enough to have struck terror into a guilty person, even had the Colonel been seated in his porch chair instead of atop an elephant which also was showing signs of irritation. This was purely sympathetic on the part of Mouse, whose temperamental rapport with the Colonel had from the first astonished Mike, but it made the huge beast forbidding none the less, so much so that Jarvis and Flavia retreated up the steps. But Vinckers and Hester did not flinch.

The Colonel studied them in silence. Sandy guessed that he was exerting all his power of will to subdue old impulses, apply the discipline of recent years to the fatal temper of early ones. Vinckers eyed him steadfastly but not insolently. Hester, less respectful, was more imprudent through her disbelief that this leonine old man, who like all old and broken spirited king of beasts had crept off to a grotto, still possessed his accented force of bygone years. She drew out a gold monogrammed case and lighted a thick Russian cigarette. She edged a little closer to Vinckers, who put his arm about her. Hester, Sandy perceived, stood in no great awe of the Colonel nor

Banking . . . Always Follows Business

NO BANK, in Ohio or elsewhere, can create business for its customers. We cannot persuade a manufacturer to apply for payroll or inventory loans when such loans are not needed. Nor can we authorize real estate loans to individuals who have little desire to buy or build. Good business makes for good bank loans.

But when merchants and manufacturers and home builders want money for legitimate purposes — when they create business and need sound financing, it is the purpose and duty of this bank to advance funds to credit-worthy borrowers.

God is everywhere present. There is power in this nearness of God. If it is fully realized, there will be restraint when temptations come. There will be inspiration to live better lives. There will be comfort when this consolation is needed. Jacob, who later was named Israel, found a transforming power in the presence of God."

Morning worship, 11; sermon by the pastor.

"What is the make-up of life? Of what does life consist? Hardly two answers would be exactly alike. Some would be directly opposite. However it is veritably true, that one's idea of life will have a direct effect on how one lives. Life is only for enjoying and some people. Life is all for self say others. Life is for getting or attaining. Life is for giving and benefiting others. So the answers go. In life, there is time, strength and thought. How they are used, will make up what life is to an individual."

Farmer Held for Wife's Death Pulling Plow

Death of his frail 34-year-old wife from over-exertion after being forced to pull a plow over "new ground" on their farm near Woodbury, Tenn., resulted in arrest of John W. Davis for her murder. Authorities also charged Davis with having performed an illegal operation on his wife shortly after she and their son, Charlie, had been hitched to the "bull-tongue". Davis, shown in jail, admitted using his wife as a plow horse, but denied performing the operation. Charlie and two other Davis children are pictured demonstrating how he was forced to pull the plow.

COLUMBIANA HI CRACKS STATE RELAY RECORD

Gregg's Pitching Sends Mullins Foremen Down To Second Straight Loss Of Season

Newsies Defeat Champion Of Class A League, 5 to 3; Old Timers Gain 3rd Win

Open Season On Defending Champs In Class A As Mullins Loses for Second Time; Veterans Continue Win Streak by Dropping Demings

It's open season on defending champions in the Class A City Softball league, much to the chagrin of Mullins Foremen, present holders of the senior circuit title.

The Foremen, who have been up on top of the Class A loop for so long that it's unethical to link their name with anything but championship, took it on the chin for the second time of the current season out at Centennial park last evening, losing to the Salem News, 5 to 3, in one of the senior circuit's two games.

The target of every team in the league, Mullins was stopped last evening by the well-placed tosses of Ralph (Sarge) Gregg, making his first start on the pitching mound for the Newsies.

Gregg mixed a good fast ball with his famed "hipper-dipper", which drops like a bomb when it comes across the plate, to limit Mullins batters to four hits in five innings. He was never in serious trouble throughout the five frames and turned in one of the best-pitched games seen thus far in the league season.

The News batters hammered out six hits from the offerings of Pitcher Demings of Mullins to support Gregg's fine hurling feat with two runs in the first inning, two in the second and one in the fourth.

Bob Ketterer, playing his first season in Class A as backstop for the "paper boys", led the hitting with two blows out of three trips to the plate, one for the circuit.

The victory was the second in four games for the Newsies, while the defeat practically eliminates Mullins from any chance of capturing first round honors in the circuit.

Those rampaging veterans of the Class A circuit, the Old Timers, recorded their third straight win in the other Class A tilt with a 10 to 5 victory over Demings.

The Pumpmakers started off strong with three runs in the first inning, but failed to defend their lead and permitted the Old Timers to score four runs in the second frame, two in the third and four in the fifth, while they were adding one tally in the second and one in the fourth.

F. Brudery, pitching for Demings, gave up nine hits in the five-inning contest, while Sam Eyer allowed seven hits while working on the mound for the Old Timers.

The Class A league, which will be idle Monday because of the holiday, will resume play Tuesday, going back to its seven-inning game schedule, which was abandoned for the last two weeks because darkness was cutting short the second game of each evening's program.

Tight pitching again featured Class B league games at the Centennial diamond at the park last evening as only 17 hits were granted in two contests. The Christians and Baptists each got three hits in a game while the Friends converted seven hits into 10 runs to defeat the Presbyterians, who made three runs on four blows.

Bailey of the Baptists and McQuiston of the Christians had the three-hit pitching performances. B. Jeffries pitched four-hit ball for the Friends.

LAWSON STARS ON MOUND FOR DETROIT CLUB

Pitches Tigers to Win In Second Game of Doubleheader

The baseball folks in Detroit and Boston should be thankful that Roxie Lawson and Footsie Marcum chose this spring to do their come-backing.

If those two hurling hopefuls hadn't started like a couple of houses afire, the Tigers would be out of the first division, and the Red Sox would be nearly out of the American league, so far as the standings are concerned.

Lawson already has won as many games as he took all last year, and has seen that No. 1 flinger in the Tigers' trek to second place. Marcum, with five victories to his credit, is the only Red Sox starter with a better than .500 average.

Both of them were disappointing flops a year ago. Lawson was never in trouble as he hurled the Tigers to a 7-2 victory over the St. Louis Browns in the nightcap of a doubleheader. Detroit also won the first game 6-5 on a homer by Hank Greenberg to climb back into second place.

Marcum muffled the Washington Senators 7-0 with six hits yesterday to put the Red Sox over the 500 mark for the first time in two weeks.

Their work featured a curtailed program in both leagues. The highlight was a 14-hit bombardment the Pittsburgh Pirates exploded on the St. Louis Cardinals for a 10-3 win, thereby stretching the Bucs' National league lead to a game and a half over the idle Giants.

The Chicago Cubs found Cincinnati pitching easy and clubbed out a 12-3 decision behind Charley Root's steady tossing. The rest of the league had an open date.

The Chicago White Sox outlasted the Cleveland Indians and came through with a 3-2 win on Zeke Bonura's timely two-bagger in the tenth inning. The start of the Yankees-Athletic series was delayed a day by rain and was carried over to a doubleheader today.

Brother Team Threatens To Take Track Title In State Meet's "B" Class

John and Joe Saunders Attract Interest In Ohio Scholastic Track and Field Competition; Canton McKinley to Play In Baseball Finals

COLUMBUS, May 29—Two brothers drew the interested eyes of spectators and the watchful eyes of opponents today in the track events of the annual Ohio High school track, tennis, golf and baseball tournaments.

John and Joe Saunders of Class B Glendale gave warning in preliminaries yesterday that they could be counted on to provide stiff competition, adding to their previous performances.

John won three firsts in last year's meet, taking the 120-yard high hurdles, the 11-yard dash and the 200-yard low hurdles. Joe was ineligible.

In yesterday's events, Joe was second in his heat of the 100-yard dash, second in his heat of the 200-yard low hurdles and won his heats in the high hurdles, 100-yard dash and the low hurdles. Joe also will high jump today and John will broad jump.

Canton McKinley met Bedford in the Class A baseball finals and Troy Elizabeth Township played Holgate in Class B.

Columbiana's Class B 880-yard relay team and Oberlin's team both broke the state record in preliminaries. Columbiana's time was 1:32.9 and Oberlin's 1:33.7. The record was Lake-side's 1933 time of 1:34.3. It was the only record broken yesterday.

Columbus Central and Dayton Fairview were tied at the half-way mark of the golf tournament with scores of 321. Bob Castor of Ashland was medalist for the first 18 holes with 74.

Other teams and their scores were: Ashland 335, Hamilton Catholic 335, Elyria 346, Toledo Libby 348, Dayton Chaminade 350, Canton McKinley 353, Akron Buchtel 356, Grandview 359, St. Clairsville 363, Cleveland Heights 370.

Both doubles and singles tennis competition was to be completed today.

Open Champion Tony Manero Meets Denny Shute In PGA

PITTSBURGH, May 29.—Golf's greatest "natural" in years brightened the professionals' championship today.

Tony Manero, the National Open titleholder, bumped into Denny Shute, defending his professionals' association crown.

It could be billed as an unofficial battle for American supremacy, bringing together the last winners of the country's two major tournaments open to professional experts.

Harold (Jug) McSpaden, Winchester, Mass., faced Ky Laffoon, Chicago, in the other 36-hole semifinal PGA contest but it couldn't compare in popular interest with the duel between champions.

Tony yesterday came from behind with a rush to overhaul Harry Cooper, just as he did in winning the open last summer at Baltusrol. A victory over Shute, a triumph in the finals tomorrow, would make him the first man in 15 years to hold both titles.

Manero's tenure as a double winner might be as brief as a fortnight, however, for he's no better than 30 to 1 shot to win 1937's open starting June 10. Back in 1932 Gene Sarazen won both titles the same year.

MILLS' BATTLE LINES TIGHTEN

Surround Plants of Three Large Independent Producers

The strongest possibilities for a peace move after the Memorial day weekend was seen in Gov. Martin L. Davey's announced intention to try to bring steel executives and union leaders together at Ohio's executive mansion in Columbus next week.

Dewey Studying Situation
James F. Dewey, one of the department of labor's conciliators, was reported in Ohio surveying the strike situation for Secretary of Labor Perkins. Dewey's job is to try to bring the opposing forces together in industrial strikes, but there was no indication that he had made any progress.

Murray expressed a willingness to attend the governor's proposed conference, but asserted the SWOC would meet steel executives only with the understanding that the union would not compromise its position. The affected concerns—Republic and Sheet and Tube—made no immediate comment. Inland has no Ohio plants.

The SWOC called the strike May 28 to enforce demands that the three independent sign agreements for collective bargaining with the CIO affiliate to represent SWOC members. The steel owners said they were willing to bargain collectively but refused to reduce to writing an agreement covering wages, working hours, and paid vacations.
